WHAT ARE THE LTSU BY ELECTIONS?

We are Here for You! Run by You!

Elections are an important part of LTSU as this process ensures we are democratic and student-led in all our endeavours, as an organisation.

Taking part in elections whether it be as a candidate or as a voter gives you - your voice, your power, and your vote! Which helps to build the plans and projects that are taken forward for Leeds Trinity Students.

We are electing specific part-time officers for BME, LGBT, and disabled students, so giving your vote for these allows you to be represented in the most effective way within LTSU.

If you want something to change on campus or your course, your elected student council makes that happen by campaigning to the University.

So make sure you vote for the right officer whose manifesto and policies align with what you want from Leeds Trinity.

WHAT IS AN OFFICER?

There are 2 Full-time Elected Officers, who are elected and paid for one year to take a Sabbatical (leave) from their course, to serve as the leaders of LTSU, and the voice of Leeds Trinity students.

There are also 14 Part-time Officers, who are volunteers, including Faculty Reps who are elected. These are voluntary roles which means they can commit to this role alongside their studies.

They are collectively responsible for promoting and defending the rights of students, campaigning on issues, promoting involvement in the Union, and supporting student communities.

Full -Time Elected Officers, become an officer trustee on the Board of Trustees, and attend University committees to speak on behalf of students.

All Elected Officers are provided with training, support, and guidance to carry out the role and make their priorities (based on their election publicity) a reality.

These roles are elected in the LTSU Elections held between January and March each year. By Elections occur in Term 1 and recruit any positions that have not been filled.

NOTE BREAK

RUNNING AN EFFECTIVE CAMPAIGN

1. Introduction

Each year during elections, we see candidates come up with some amazing ideas of how to campaign and communicate with students! This guide is based on advice from former Candidates and Officers and will give you some great tips on how to build the most effective campaign possible.

It's important to point out that you don't need to do everything in this guide to win (although the more you do, the more it will help), and there are things not included, because well, we haven't thought of them yet! It's also important to point out that money is not the most important thing in an election.

Each year students with small budgets are successful because they focus on the most effective methods—namely being creative and going out and talking to as many students as possible.

Election campaigns are great fun, and you'll meet people you would never normally meet – so make sure you enjoy it and good luck.

RUNNING AN EFFECTIVE CAMPAIGN

2. Planning Your Campaign

Have you submitted your nomination?

One of the key things you'll need to do is to submit your application to stand in the election.

This is all done through our website via an online form.

All of this is outlined in this Candidate Handbook that is given to all students running. If you are ever in any doubt or have any questions you should contact the Deputy Returning Officer or a member of SU staff for more information. See Key Contacts.

Remember, if you're unsure – ask!

Why Are You Standing?

Now that you have read up to this point in the Candidate Handbook, it is time to start thinking about why you are standing.

The first thing you should do is to set aside a few hours to think about why you want to run, what you would do for students, and how you plan on conveying that message. These ideas are what you want to do and change and should be expressed in your manifesto.

RUNNING AN EFFECTIVE CAMPAIGN

Once nominations close, the next step should be to contact a couple of students who you know, to run your ideas by them and to try and develop a clear message and brand for your campaign.

In the early planning stages, try to keep these meetings to just a few people, as you don't want to overcomplicate your ideas.

Who Are You Representing?

Most importantly you should consider the students you hope to represent – after all this is why you are running for election.

Remember, people's experiences at University can vary because of social, cultural, and other differences. So, think about issues that will be common to everyone regardless of their background.

A good starting point is the one thing you have in common: you are all studying for a degree and furthering your education.

You can then start thinking about a broad range of issues that affect different people – running ideas past specific group if you're unsure about something.

A great way of doing this is to talk to your fellow students and friends, to see what issues they might be facing and how you can help.

RUNNING AN EFFECTIVE CAMPAIGN

What Are Your Key Policies?

Having thought about the different types of students you will be representing, and the issues that affect them most, you should try and shape these into your key policies for your campaign.

These policies should be what you put on your posters and leaflets and will form talking points when you're out on campus talking to students.

A good number to aim for is four or five that you think are a) the most important, and b) most appealing to students. The more original or creative these are, the more you'll set yourself apart from the other candidates, and therefore the more recognisable your campaign will be.

You need to tread the line between populism (what students want) and what is achievable in a year.

Remember, you can have a full manifesto online where you can develop these ideas further, so, try and keep them short and snappy for the promotion material.

Finally, if you're in doubt, about whether you can campaign on something, ask yourself two questions:

- i. Does it affect the students I'm running to represent?
- ii. Have I got an idea of how to solve or improve it?

RUNNING AN EFFECTIVE CAMPAIGN

3. Your Campaign Message

A key element to any successful campaign is the publicity behind it – how you tell students about your ideas and persuade them to vote for you.

Campaign Theme

Many students choose a campaign theme that is linked to their name or something that they think will appeal to students. Students' Union Elections over everything from Harry Potter-themed election campaigns to funny puns involving people's names, to more serious themes based on a specific policy or idea.

Campaign Colour

This sounds like a simple decision, but you want to choose something that will stand out and draw people's attention to your campaign.

Colour is more powerful than we realise. How colours interact with each other can affect our emotions and perceptions. By understanding colour theory and how to use it to your advantage, you can engage with your audience in a more meaningful, connective way to drive your campaign.

In the past, people have picked colours that link with their name, campaign ideas, and items of clothing they already own.

8 RUNNING AN EFFECTIVE CAMPAIGN

Campaign Slogan(s)

Many students decide that they want to have a slogan that students can remember them by.

Think about slogans used by political parties and political figures, such as Obama's 2008 'Yes, we can'. This was effective as it made a clear link to what people wanted and was simple enough to be repeated time and time again.

Another popular choice is to link your slogan to your name, which will help with recognition when students vote. If you think hard enough, almost any name can be made into a slogan.

Translated Literature

Universities are becoming increasingly international in their student makeup. This means a greater proportion of voters will have a first language other than English. An option you might therefore consider is having your publicity translated to ensure your message reaches these students effectively. Please make sure you get translated text checked beforehand.

BY ELECTION PENALTIES

Three types of penalties can be applied to restore fairness following the violation of an election rule.

These are not prescriptive penalties but indicate the type of action that is available to the Returning and Deputy Returning Officers.

Warning:

this is where you will be given a formal warning issued by the Deputy returning Officer which will be logged.

Campaign Ban:

this can be used to prevent a team from campaigning to remove any specific advantages gained from misconduct.

Disqualification:

this is applied only in the most serious of circumstances where no other penalty can redress the unfairness caused.
